DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. Claim 4 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

It is unclear as to how the transfer means, which claimed to be unable to travel, can accommodate the delivery of articles at different vertical levels. It is unclear as to how the transfer operating section, which claimed to be able to only rotate and project or retract, can accommodate the delivery of articles at different vertical levels.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Hayashi 6,582,174.

Hayashi '174 discloses a material handling system per claimed invention. The system comprises rotary shelf 25 that is capable of a complete 360° rotation. Said rotary shelf rotates around a vertical axis. The system comprises fixed shelf 23 located on the opposite and on the same plane as said rotary shelf (Figure 10). The rotary shelf 25 can be considered as being located at the rear of the system, while the fixed shelf 23 can be considered as being located at the front. The system comprises a transfer means 22 located between the fixed shelf and the rotary shelf to facilitate the transferring of cassette pods between said two shelves. The transfer means rotates about a fixed vertical axis that is parallel with the axis of the rotary shelf. Said transfer means comprises a programmable robot arm that is capable of providing rotating motion and front-to-rear motion. The entire system is located within a clean air environment. It is at least obvious, if not inherent, that the robot arm can be programmed to firstly move the cassette pod in a circular path, and then move said cassette in a front-to-rear fashion, in order to transfer said cassette from the fixed shelf 23 to the rotary shelf 25.

In regards to claims 3 and 4, it is obvious that plurality of fixed shelves 23 can be provided within Hayashi '174 system to facilitates additional cassette storage spaces.

Response to Arguments

4. Applicant's arguments filed 09/07/2004 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant's claimed language does not provide any structural distinction over the prior art. Applicant argued that the instant claimed apparatus provides different movement paths than Hayashi '174. However, it would have been at least obvious, if not inherent, for one of ordinary skill in the art to have provided such claimed movement by the mere fact that Hayashi '174 robot arm can be pre-programmed to perform any rotational, project, and/or retract movements.

Conclusion

5. Additional references made of record and not relied upon are considered to be of interest to applicant's disclosure: see attached USPTO Form 892.
